

Abstract of the Disclosure

The system is for searching job components required for a predetermined job, effectively and in a short time, and for online purchasing the job components required reliably with a user terminal connected to a network. A service system comprises a plurality of job method provider terminals 101 for providing information Web pages for a predetermined job method, and a plurality of job component provider terminals 100 for providing job components necessary to perform the predetermined job method, for delivering the job components and for settling an account of a payment for the job components. Both of them are connected to a user terminal 103 via a computer network 104. In the system a coordination terminal 102 for ordering the job components necessary for the predetermined job method, on the information Web pages of the predetermined job method, browsed by the user, directly from the job component provider terminal 100 is further connected.

00725518.112900